

Parole Board

Your name, Tressor Lorton Trevorsham sounds like a character in a bad situation comedy puncturing the rich.

It did to me too, until I remembered TLT when I came on board here.

My grandfather.

Do you see an irony in appearing here as a criminal, when your grandfather...

I'm sorry M'am but I don't see it in any literary light. I disgraced his name and deserved the state's punishment. Your lawyer marshalled so many sterling character witnesses, judges and the like.

i have no doubt, and many thought there should have been no possibility of parole.

You took three lives.

And pray to God for forgiveness every day of my life, and will continue to do so, regardless of today's outcome.

We must tackle two items of business. The psychiatrist's report and the future plan you have laid out.

The former is bleak for you. Dr Bechelist labels you the consummate con man, and an habitual liar.

I don't blame him. I adopted the jailhouse con when I got here and shifted perpetually, depending on my own reading in psychiatry. He hasn't spoken to me lately. I know he'd find a shocking change. A Christian one I'm proud to say.

I'd use those words describing your future plan. Become a medical missionary and threaten body and soul of Indians in interior Panama.

Bring car and Jesus there, M'am, yes. For the rest of my life. That is the chance that I am begging for!

Well, that impresses all of us,
I feel sure in stating that.
And going further, I predict you will be paroled. We have discussed your case thoroughly.

I've made a strong statement without an actual vote, so any member can lodge an objection.

No? Then thank you Terrance, we're through with you.

You won't regret it. My life will be a force for good under Jesus Christ!

I do have a reservation, hardly an objection. I'd like a fuller report from Dr B for the record. It changes nothing, but the original was so poorly written.

So ordered.

Next case?

Hector Gonzales.

Ten minutes till lunch, Secretary, so turn off the recorder. Send him in. We have just enough time to deal with this pig.
